

The British Psychological Society

Promoting excellence in psychology

Neuropsychology

Neuropsychology is concerned with the assessment and rehabilitation of people with brain injury or other neurological disease.

What do neuropsychologists do?

Neuropsychologists work with people of all ages dealing with patients who have had traumatic brain injury, strokes, toxic and metabolic disorders, tumours and neurodegenerative diseases. They require not only general clinical skills and knowledge of the broad range of mental health problems, but also a substantial degree of specialist knowledge in the neurosciences.

For more information on how to become a neuropsychologist, discover your journey into psychology at...

www.bps.org.uk/careers

The British Psychological Society