

Dr Shelley McKeown Jones

Shelley McKeown Jones is an Associate Professor of Social Psychology in the School of Education at the University of Bristol. Her research focuses on applying social psychological theories to better understand and improve intergroup relations for youth in conflict and diverse settings. She has published numerous articles, a book and an edited volume, and has received Early Career BPS and APA awards for her contributions to social and peace psychology.

Shelley is currently Chair of the Social Psychology Section (2019-2021), having previously served as an elected member of the Committee between 2015-19. Shelley was inspired to apply to join the Committee following her winning of the Section's Early Career Award in 2014. During her time on the Committee, she has taken on roles as book review editor and later as co-editor for Social Psychological Review as well as co-editor of our Section newsletter.

You can follow Shelley on Twitter (@Shelley_McKeown).